The Green Energy Act, the Feed In Tariff Program and other government initiatives, such as the Aboriginal Loan Guarantee Program, are opening up new opportunities for renewable energy development and, in particular, for Aboriginal communities. How are Aboriginal communities responding? What kinds of partnerships are being created between industry and Aboriginal communities? How does industry move beyond mere consultation and begin to create long-term business relationships with Aboriginal communities? This session will address these issues from the perspective of the Aboriginal communities as well as industrial partners.
